Walk, Move and Live with Dr. Weil's Integrative Footwear Collection for Spring 2012

Groundbreaking designs take you where you want to go, balanced, energized and in style

San Rafael, CA – Spring 2012 – Andrew Weil, M.D., an internationally recognized leader and pioneer in the field of integrative medicine, offers inspiration to those who want to walk in comfort and style, with his healing-oriented spring 2012 collection. Featuring AMS Aided Motion System™ orthotic technology, Weil sandals parallel the spring season's most popular trends with snakeskin, nubuck and mixed metallic detailing. The newly introduced active walking collection combines outdoor technology with savvy style appeal for optimal performance with an edge.

"We want to promote healthy feet for the active lifestyle, providing our customers with a revitalized performance-based style and improved functionality" says Phil Vasyli, founder of Orthaheel USA and co-founder of the Dr. Weil Integrative Footwear Collection. "We are especially pleased to unveil our new active walking collection which lends our functional footwear a sportier edge."

Designed to put some spring in your step and add some style to your everyday look, the Weil spring collection features a wide range of silhouettes, from the everyday sandals and feminine slip-ons to the adventurous active walking shoe. For those who love a dash of flash in their skinny strap sandals, Weil's Spirit II in snakeskin makes a lovely addition to a breezy spring dress. For off-duty ensembles, the Dhyana features a soft and feminine flower accent while boasting a back-strap for maximum support and comfort. And the widely popular Restore II maintains the signature sleek straps with added adjustable buckles, ideal for daily activities.

For rugged outdoor performance, the Rhythm is offered in earth-inspired tones with key elements to support an active lifestyle. All performance shoes feature a signature removable orthotic, durable and slip-resistant rubber sole, flex grooves and lightweight, breathable mesh uppers.

Dr. Weil donates all of his after-tax profits from sales of Weil Integrative Footwear products directly to the Weil Foundation, a not-for-profit organization dedicated to supporting integrative medicine through training, education and research.

The footwear collection ranges in price from $89.95 to $129.95 and is available at Dillards and select retailers across North America.
